Losses of Time.

be aware of losing or wasting inches of time. They are the little foxes at run away with many days. So much can be done in them and with them, often the very things for which we sigh hopelessly. Fill them, every one. Keep something handy something that fits the interval. Remember a famous book was given because a lord chancellor was not to be idle throughout the ten minutes his wife made him sit each day for dinner. Retail, o, all the men, noble and eminent, so have climbed to the heights by saving inches of time. All of us must hope to become likewise eminent, but we can reasonably and easily make ourselves happy with fragments wrought in the fragmentary moments which we might unprofitably leave vacant.—Delmonico.

A Moving Appeal.

He was a motherless boy and his mother's only child, but some of the fathers had decided that he should go to a boys' school fifty miles from home, and at last the father had agreed to the plan.

Forty-eight hours after his boy's departure the father received a letter, which was, although not faultless as an example of spelling, so much to the point and so in accord with his own feelings that the plans for the future were speedily reconsidered.

"Dear father," wrote the exile, "it's all right here, and I'm not unsmiling, I believe, but life is very hard, and don't you think you'd better let us spend some more of it together? Your affectionate son, Thomas."

What We Eat.

The Hallander eats decayed shark, but turns with disgust from bread and butter.

The Chinese are fond of stewed dog, but consider beef unhealthy. The Turk deems dried grasshoppers a delicacy, but an orator fills him with abhorrence.

The English eat periwinkles, a kind of sea snail, but will have none of the French escargot—a land snail fattened on vine leaves and strawberries.

The West Indian native adores a supper of baked snake and palm worms fried in their own fat, but the very thought of stewed rabbit makes him shudder.

The African bushman eats capers, but scorns hamburger cheese.

Savages eat all eggs, barring none. They eat hawks' eggs, alligators' eggs, turtles' eggs, ants' eggs, snakes' eggs. But savages consider crab meat unwholesome.

Claribel—I wonder what that creature meant.

Lisette—What creature?

Claribel—Why, Tentworth, of course. When I told him everybody said I was improving in my singing he said he was delighted to hear H. The idea!—Exchange.

Sydney's London Statue.

There is a statue of Byron in London, in Hamilton gardens, separated only by a railing from the broad drive in Hyde park and facing directly across the monstrous effigy of Achilles. Even on April 19 Byron's statue receives no attention save for the single wrath of George de Byron placed at its foot under the bequest of the lady who left a legacy for this purpose and for the inscription of a memorial notice in the Times until the day that the dean of Westminster allows Byron's name to be inscribed in the poets' corner of the abbey.

ROYALTY COULD MOVE ON.

It Was When Buffalo Bill's Show Reached the Eternal City.

Buffalo Bill's Wild West arrived under the walls of the Eternal City, and toward the great scout's whooping arena we bent our steps, writes South Parkington in Everybody's. The dance was on when we arrived, but we found an usher who was shoving and haranguing a confused, seat seeking crowd of Italians, exhorting them in homelike Nebraskan words.

"Everything's gone all to thunder today," he remarked to us crossly. "That there king and queen's here." (His manner of alluding to the royal personages suggested that he thought of them as cards in a deck.) "We never got a word they were coming till half an hour before we opened. The boxes were all took, and we've had one blank of a time since things up and getting that king and queen settled right. These coupons call for the next box beyond 'em, and the dago ushers have gone and stuck some people in there, somebody that belongs to the king and queen, I reckon, and—"

"Then we'll have to give up our box?" some one asked nervously.

"Now! You got the tickets, ain't you? You got 'em! Come on!"

A lady and three gentlemen were seated in the box numbered upon our coupons. "You got out of there," said our guide informally. "That ain't your box."

There was an exclamation of horror from an upper tier, and one of the English speaking Italian ushers came rushing down an aisle with a blanched face. He bent himself double before the occupants of the box, uttering stricken apologies in Italian, which were abruptly checked by our guide.

"Here! I ain't got no more time to waste. These folks got coupons for the whole box. Tell them people to get out o' there, and tell 'em to hurry."

"Get them out!" repeated the Italian, immeasurably shocked. "Impossible! You do not understand! It is the Prince and Princess di—"

Our guide bent upon him a look of withering pity. "That puts all the ice in Hudson's bay, don't it?" he replied, with venomous distinctness, and then, exasperated to the extent of his self control, "You git 'em out o' there!"

We interfered at this point and effected a compromise by squeezing more chairs into the box, to the painful surprise of our usher, who as he slouched away manifested his opinion of us as "easy."

Our Honeybees.

All the honeybees in this country having originally been imported from Europe or Asia, there is no racial difference between the wild ones and the domesticated. Those that live in trees are simply the descendants of those that from time to time have taken "French leave" from their owners' hives and reverted to a state of nature. The vast bulk of the wild bees are of the German or black race, while the standard domesticated bee is the Italian. But that, however, is only because the Germans were the first to be introduced here. Just when the Germans came is in doubt, but it was some time in the seventeenth century. Certainly it was not until the close of the eighteenth century that any bees were found west of the Mississippi. The Italians used to say they could mark the advance of the white man by the appearance of bees in the woods.—David Almon in Outlook.

Helping the Witness.

For more than an hour a witness for the defense had dodged questions. His faulty memory was particularly exasperating to the counsel for the plaintiff, who was seeking to recall to the witness' recollection an event of four or five years previous. Eventually the man remembered "something about it."

"Ah," continued the lawyer for the plaintiff, "what did you think of it at the time?"

"Really," said the witness, speaking before the lawyer for the defense had time to interpose objection, "it was so long ago I can't recall exactly what I thought of it."

"Well," shouted the cross examiner excitedly, "if you can't recall exactly tell us what you think now you thought then."—New York Times.

FLORAL SUPERSTITIONS.

Country Beliefs About the Mistletoe, Flowers and Luck.

There is nothing which grows around which there is more superstition woven than the homely mistletoe. Not only is mistletoe the crowning entertainment of a julep and a thing which makes sedate fellows gambol and roll like six-month-old kittens; but, according to tradition, the different mists have supernatural properties, and there are good and bad mists. Pennsylvania, aside from its qualification as a flea discourager, is said to make a quarrelsome husband and wife stop bickering if it is given to them by some friend. Catnip, on the other hand, when chewed creates quarrelsomeness and is said to make even mild and gentle people fierce. If catnip is held in the hand until heated and then put into the hand of another, it will, so goes the superstition, so control that person that he or she cannot leave you so long as the catnip is retained in the hand.

Spearman will prevent illness so long as it is worn about the wrist. If spearman is mixed with salt and applied to the bite of a mad dog, the wound will heal, it is said. In the olden days the children used to put a bit of spearman in the coats on Christmas day, believing that at the exact time when the Saviour was born the mist would blossom.

The superstitions which cluster around flowers are as many as there are different flowers. It is considered unlucky to gather flowers out of season, as before and after the season they are said to belong to the fairies. The first wild flowers which are gathered by a young woman in the spring should spell the initials of her future husband, if the superstition holds true.

Here is a schedule of superstitions about finding the first flower of the season:

If found on Monday, good luck all the year.

If found on Tuesday, large undertakings, which will be successful.

If found on Wednesday, a wedding in the family.

If found on Thursday, hard work with little profit.

If found on Friday, unexpected wealth.

If found on Saturday, misfortune.

If found on Sunday, best luck of all.—New York Tribune.

Our History One of Plunder.

We have been exploiting a continent, the broadest and richest ever allotted to any people. A horde of plunderers, we have swept down upon its treasures, consuming ruthlessly its forests, impoverishing its soil, sowing its meadows to the weeds and burning its treasured mountains as our barbarian forefathers burned the hills of Rome. As robbers we have succeeded tremendously. That has been historic our success. We have had but one Euler son. The great Americans have been Wilson, Morse, Fulton and their like, together with the masters of business who have heaped up the largest fortunes the world has ever known. Were all America to be looted out, past and present, the loss to the world of culture, thought and beauty would not equal the loss of one small year of Athens. The time is surely coming when we can live no more by plunder, but must set ourselves to build and to plant and to renew our life from within. The day of our reckoning will also surely come. We cannot much longer grow rich by devastation nor even live by it. America's wealth must come from her men.—President Thomas of Middlebury College in Leslie's Weekly.

Compensation.

When Wilson Hobart married Hetty Lewis there were many people who predicted domestic troubles, even tragedies, but they were mistaken. The Hobarts were to all appearances an unusually happy couple.

"I reckon Hetty must have learned to keep her temper better than she used to," remarked one person to whom this state of affairs was in explicable. "You don't look a bit older than the day you were married, Wilson."

"I don't know as she has," said Mr. Hobart, with his slow smile. "I tell her I guess she's got enough on hand to last her. She needn't save any to accommodate me. And I can tell you," he added, with enthusiasm, "it would take more than any temper ever I saw to sour Hetty's bread or her cream pie."—Youth's Companion.

Legend of a Church Steeple.

The most notable thing about West Bergholt is the way in which the worshippers are called to prayer. In the churchyard there is a quaint looking affair which has the appearance of a huge cage, for, though of wood, it is wickerlike in construction. Inside this building are the church bells, mounted as in the ordinary way, but without ropes. Each bell is in charge of a ringer, who lays hold of the bell wheel and swings it over. There is a legend that when the church steeple was about to be built the devil came during the night and demolished the work of the previous day. This unfinished tower is dated 1525.—London Chronicle.

Toothsome Pains.

A strange case has just occurred at Fothering, showing the effect of the imagination in causing disease and cure. A professional man on a visit there took out his four false teeth while shaving, but, forgetting the fact and failing to find them later, suddenly concluded that he must have swallowed them accidentally. At once he began to suffer pain. A doctor was sent for, to whom he described his agonies. Emetics were administered, but in vain, and the tortures made him twist his body convulsively. Then a maid brought the teeth, which had dropped behind the dressing table, and instantly the pains ceased.—London Mail.

W. T. HALL
Showers tonight and Wednesday.

They are looking aired
Now we shall see what we shall see

Don't look long faced tomorrow no matter which way it goes

Some of them got taken on today that wont wear off in two years, or four years

The world will know before I sleeps tonight who's who at the white house, or know the reason why.

Glad these times don't come oftener than ten years. We could hardly stand it oftener than that.

Owing to private information received away ahead of the final count, we are able to state the Bill wins, as we expected

The crowd will rally around north Foster street tonight, to get the first messages from the election that is flashed over the wires.

Hereafter the man who sticks his head up for office in Houston county will have to have a Democratic record as long as the pedigree of a bird dog

Oh yes, in the rush we forgot about it. We are to have a circus, after all. On the 23 Sun Bros will have their circus in our midst. They were here four or five years ago. Feel better about it now.

We can't help from wanting to see the cold mitten handed the man who supports Taft in this election, when the bread and meat of the voter is made from ninety-nine per cent Democracy. That is the kind that should be remembered in the sweat hereafter, already started this way.

When that boy came in, tired and worn out, and hungry enough to eat anything, he thought he was making a fairly good trade when he exchanged his birthright for the mess of pottage. We think he was in a manner excusable, for he was a hungry boy, even if the papers did criticize his actions severely at the time, and predict that he would never have anything. Had the poor fellow lived till now, we doubt very much if he had given his birthright for a two-by-four government job

Good for Nightmares.

One sweet memory lingers with us like the scent of a rose. We have yet to hear of one old confederate soldier voting the Republican ticket, who has a clean record, showing that he dropped everything and shouldered a musket for his country and stayed by the confederacy till Lee's surrender. That noble band of patriots—fast fading away—remembers but too well the trouble they had in dealing with the wretched Republicans in those cloudy days following the close of the war. You couldn't get one of them to stick in a vote for the Republican party that tried to put the foot of the negro on the neck of the white man when his property was destroyed, his health gone, and he could not defend himself by law

If the fathers and grandfathers of some of those young buihen wearing the Republican emblems could rise up from the graves of past experience and speak a word or two, those boys would have nightmares for weeks

Ask your father and grandfather, your mother and grandmother, about those times, and see if they tell you to vote a Republican ticket at all. For they know what the party has always stood for.

The sins of the fathers is visited upon the sons. The sins of the sons will be visited upon the fathers, for turn about is fair play

Please excuse this one. We didn't mean to get wound up again

The Courts to Decide

Whether a property owner has any rights in the streets, fronting his house, is a question the courts of Atlanta will have to decide. Mr. Asa Chandler of that city, got the privilege from the city council to lay a wire from one of his stores to another in the same street. A property owner, Marvin Brandon, denies that a private citizen can lay wires in the street, and that the city council has no authority to grant such privilege, and has enjoined Mr. Chandler from going ahead with his work. Mr. Chandler says the street railway and lighting company is behind Mr. Brandon in this suit to prevent competition

Mr. Chandler says he is lighting one of his houses with his own private electric plant and that he has a surplus which he desires to use in the Moore-March building. Mr. Chandler further says that his lights from his own private plant cost him only one and a half cents per kilowatt, whereas the light company charge him 7 cents per kilowatt, and thinks he should have the right to make his own lights if he wants to do so.

This contention of Mr. Brandon is a new one and its termination will be watched with interest

At the same time, these low prices for lights will make our people wonder why the cost of lights are to be raised in Dothan from 10 cts to 15 cts per kilowatt

Mr. W. S. Wilson, who has been spending several months in New Mexico and Texas has returned, looking as well as he ever did

Oysters will be served by the ladies of the Baptist church tomorrow at the court house from 11:30 a. m. to 10 p. m.

A Remarkable Prediction
Manassah Cutler of Massachusetts in a circular in 1787 "honoring the settlement which the New Englanders were about to plant on the Ohio at the mouth of the Mississippi, declared that 'the current down the Ohio and the Mississippi' for produce and merchandise of all sorts would one day 'be more crowded than any other stream on earth, which was a remarkable prediction, considering that it was made twenty years before Fulton's Clermont was launched in the Hudson, which was the first steamboat in the world ever put in successful operation.

The Cubans are perhaps the most pronounced coffee drinkers in the world. They import 20,000,000 pounds annually.
The Origin of Phoenix Park
The origin of the name of Phoenix park Dublin has puzzled many scholars unacquainted with the Irish language. The name was called in the Irish vernacular Fionn uisce pronounced fionnisk, which signifies clear or fair water and which articulated in the brief English manner exactly resembled the word phoenix. The spring or well so called from which the park derives its name still exists close to the Dublin entrance of the vice royal lodge. It is situated in a glen beside the lower lake and is one of the romantic objects of the park.

Yeomen Homes.
The housing problem in Elizabeth is a day may have left the laborer in very primitive dwellings but it gave noble munitions to the great and to farmers and country craftsmen pleasant homes of such durability and such charm that many of them stand today to shame us into a less contemptible mode of building than that which the nineteenth century produced—Country Life.

"See here," said the tailor as he head of the young man off, "do you cross the street every time you see me to keep from paying that bill you owe me?"
"I should say not," replied the young man.

To keep you from asking for it, answered the other. Chicago News.

The woods pulp mill used for making veneer are red, gum, maple and yellow poplar. White oak yields more than half of the total product. Red gum is largely used for baskets and maple for furniture. More valuable than these, however, are white oak and walnut veneer. Birch which can be cut very thin is used very largely for wooden plates. A number of other kinds of woods are used.

Gunnery Patron Saint
Why was St. Barbara chosen the patron saint of all gunners? Is one of those things which is known and which our English people do not know. Meanwhile it is a fact that she does indeed figure as a gunner's patron saint.
It is the old story that Barbara was the gun room and that she may be found with that name attached to it in all the gunners' guilds. The fact is that she is the patron saint of all gunners and that their belief in her is a very old one.

Everybody Had a Look

A bureau with a large mirror in it stood on the sidewalk about half an hour the other day while somebody was moving and every person who passed took notice. The children played all around it of course making faces at each other in it. Women looked conscious as they approached and some tried to keep from glancing that way but it was no use. They wanted to see how their skirts hung and if their belts were all right in the back. The men adjusted their hats or felt their ties as they walked by with a frank stare. Even the movers studied their own countenances and a little dog ran up and barked at himself. Everybody had a look. --New York Press

An Unseamy Charity

In all the cafes and beer halls of Germany a large canister is placed on a table in the center of each establishment. Every time one of the guests lights a fresh cigar he gets up and deposits in the canister the end of the one he has just been smoking. This receptacle is a sort of alms box with a funnel shaped lid secured by means of a padlock. A charitable association supplies all places of public resort with these boxes for the purpose of collecting odds and ends of tobacco cigarettes and cigars. The produce of the sale is devoted to the purchase of clothing which is distributed among poor children at Christmas. The charity is believed to be the most malodorous and insensate on record.

The Masterpiece

"We have read your manuscript," said the publisher, "and are convinced that you have written a masterpiece. It will make your fame secure."

"Ah," replied the gratified author, "I am glad to hear you say so. I hope your judgment may be verified. And will you bring it out immediately?"

"No. That would be a fatal mistake. Nobody would ever take the trouble to discover its merits. Your labor would be wasted. Go out and do something to draw public attention to yourself. Leave your wife and run away with an affinity get arrested as an anarchist, but crank or try to cross the Atlantic ocean in a barrel--anything to make everybody talk about you. We will have the book ready so that it may be put on the market at the psychological moment. Good day, sir. I hope we may begin to hear from you soon." --Chicago Record Herald

A Last Spell or Two

Here is a paragraph in which many of the words have been spelled in exactly the same way. Can you find the words in which the letters are not spelled the same way?

The mind of man naturally hates everything that looks like a punishment upon it and is apt to fancy itself under a sort of condemnation when the sight is put up in a narrow compass and shortened on every side by the may-bourhood of words and meanings. On the contrary, a spacious horizon is an image of liberty which the eye has from to things above to expatiate at large on the immensity of its views and to lose itself amidst the variety of objects that offer themselves to its observation. Such wide and audacious ideas are as pleasing to the fancy as the speculation of eternity of infinitude is to the understanding. --New York Mail

The Kissing Germ Menace

In the waiting room of the Union station at Washington recently the wife of a federal official who is extremely fond of dogs figured in an amusing incident.

In the next seat to her sat a small dog evidently belonging to a showily dressed woman in the seat just beyond. As the canine a friendly little beast, evidenced by snuggly wags of his tail his desire for friendly relations the Washington woman leaned over and began to pat him on the head. Then as she leaned even closer toward the dog the showily dressed individual whose air of concern indicated her disapproval of the situation immediately reached out and withdrew the pet from the stranger.

"Excuse me," said she, "but I never allow my dog to kiss strangers." --Philadelphia Ledger

Perverse Women

Walter Pater, an old man at 67, is bald as a roof and grotesquely plain regarded every woman with as did Dean Swift who wrote a very little wit is infused in a woman as we are pleased with few words spoken in tellingly by a parrot. "You don't approve of marriage," a friend once observed to Pater. "No," he replied, "nor would anybody else if he gave the matter proper consideration. Men and women are always pulling different ways. Women won't pull our way. They are still on it."
